For each of the year that you have spent in schools, honing your skills, getting ready for the real world, we extend our warmest regards. Those were the most crucial days of learning. The culmination of your efforts, at this point, would mean that this is the beginning of the road towards the realizations of your talents, skills and career potentials. Congratulations to you, and your families.

We are truly hopeful that we will begin to actually see how collective changes from diverse communities can make a difference. Dear graduates, look beyond today, imagine the future is right at the tip of your fingers. You have it there, ready for your action. From here on, is your call. Make your own mark in this world by pursuing your dreams, realize your dreams as you conquer your doubts, and optimize your potentials. Make your mark in this world by defining your contributions in our country.

The realities and the experiences you have gained will be a formidable armor you would need during the most challenging times of adulthood. Be that ripple of change this nation holds his aspirations for. When you are ready to give what you have, stand proud, the good has been paid forward. You are our pride, your families', and their happiness.

Our decisive action paves the integration of what every child dream of, providing the kind of opportunities, the industries that infuse work-life values. Your aspirations, and theirs, and ours become one.

The Department of Education will remain relentless in pursuing actions for our learners' dreams. Together with all our stakeholders, the administrators, the teachers and the rest of the personnel, we will continually evolve to make use of all possible resources for all our learners. Let us look at this milestone as success. This is not just in leading and discerning what we need as an organization, but in developing the quality of future we sought for.
